

GERARD'S PEACE EFFORT SCORED BY THE KAISER; BREAK FEARED

Ambassador Home to Warn President That Submarine War Is Likely to Be Resumed Before Summer.

VON TIRPITZ PARTY IS GAINING ASCENDANCY

Emperor William Declines to Discuss Plan for Ending War With Representative of United States Government.

The following illuminating article is from the pen of William C. Bullitt, who has been for many months the correspondent of the Philadelphia Public Ledger and who is regarded as one of the ablest and most reliable journalists in the United States.

New York.—As I witnessed you on Friday from the Frederick VIII. Ambassador Gerard positively brings no peace proposals from the Kaiser to President Wilson. He has returned to the United States to discuss with the president the steps, diplomatic and military, which should be taken by the United States to prevent Germany from beginning again to sink merchantmen without warning. I make this statement not as a quotation from the ambassador, but as a result of my own observations in Berlin during the last few months.

I have visited the American embassy almost daily during this period and have had the pleasure of traveling from Copenhagen to the United States in company with the ambassador. Moreover, when in Berlin my sources of information included nearly all the prominent German statesmen, among them the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs von Jagow, his assistant, Excellency Zimmermann, President von Cuno, the Director of the Reichsbank, Secretary of State for the Interior Helfferich, Secretary of State for the Colonies Solf, Dr.
Wahler Rathsma, president of Germany's greatest electrical company and organizer of Germany's war industries, the leaders of the parties in the Reichstag, many generals and lesser officers.

I am able to say with absolute certainty that the ambassador brings no statement of definite peace terms either from the Kaiser or from the chancellor or from the heads of the German government. Ambassador Gerard has not seen the Kaiser since his visit to the great headquarters last April.
Germany's Real Rulers Oppose U. S.
Mediation.

Moreover, I am able to state from German sources that four weeks ago the Kaiser refused to grant to Ambassador Gerard another conference with the council at headquarters for the purpose of discussing Germany's peace terms. That council rules Germany. The Kaiser presides and, at the side of Chancellor von Hindenburg and Ludendorff, Chancellor von Beth-mann-Hollweg, Admiral von Holtzdorff, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs von Jagow, Secretary of State for the Interior Helfferich and several other officials. When Germany's peace terms are formulated they will be formulated by that council, and the fact that the American ambassador was not granted a conference at headquarters is alone proof positive that Germany is not considering a move for peace by way of the White House.

Ambassador Gerard had talks with the Chancellor and von Jagow before he left Berlin, but they were merely conversations in which the leaders of the foreign office reaffirmed their willingness to talk about peace in the customary unspecific manner, and offered no basis for a peace move by the president. Indeed, great as is the desire for peace in Germany, the leaders of the foreign office do not look with favor upon mediation by the president of the United States.
At the present moment Germans from throne to stable believe "the hand of Wilson is the hand of England," and a recent emissary of the president who was sent to convince the German foreign office of the president's true neutrality completely failed to shake this belief.

Thinking of War Rather Than of Peace.

Indeed, at the present moment Germany is thinking a great deal less about peace via the United States than about war with the United States. That is the true reason for the return of Mr. Gerard. The ambassador's object is to discuss with the president the specific steps which may be taken by the United States to keep Germany from beginning again to sink merchant ships without warning. In addition, his wish is to acquaint the president with the details of the inner political struggle between the supporters of von Tirpitz and the supporters of the chancellor, a struggle whose outcome will determine whether the United States is to be drawn into the war.
The fact that Mr. Gerard has seen fit to leave his post indicates, to be sure, a belief on the part of the ambassador that there is danger of an immediate resumption of sinking without warning. But Politikon, the leading newspaper of Copenhagen was well informed when it wrote: "Ambassador Gerard is returning to the United States to impress upon the government the danger of a resumption of relentless submarine warfare before next spring."

In Berlin one hears on every side the prediction that sinking without warning will be recommended with the next six months. The supporters of the chancellor, who is opposed to sinking without warning, remark:
"There is an even chance that von Tirpitz will win before spring." The chancellor bases his opposition to the resumption of sinking without warning on the assertion: "No submarine warfare can do England any good but compensate us for the entrance into the war of the United States, Holland, Denmark and Norway."

Feel Sure They Could Starve England.
The Tirpitz argument runs: "We can starve England in three months if the submarines were allowed to sink without warning. The United States is as much an ally of England as any British colony. President Wilson sends notes to us which are virtually ultimatums every time we break international law; he never follows up his protests against England's infractions of international law." This argument, backed by the passionate hatred which Germans of all classes now feel for the United States, has been making headway at considerable speed during the last six months. Unless the government of the United States takes action to weaken the hand of the Tirpitz party and to strengthen the hand of the chancellor it is highly probable that the "relentless" submarine warfare will be recommended.

In American circles in Berlin it is believed that the president should take three steps to avoid the resumption of sinking without warning, and it is my belief that Ambassador Gerard will recommend those steps to the president when he sees him tomorrow.

First, The United States should build at once a fleet of 1,000 aeroplanes and should train at least 2,000 military aviators.

Second, The United States should build and man a fleet of at least 1,000 swift submarine destroyers of the type now used by the British.
If the United States had such fleets the supporters of Tirpitz could no longer argue, as they can today, with some reason, that the United States could do Germany no actual military harm, and Ambassador Gerard and the chancellor would have a trump to lay on the table of the great headquarters when the "sink without warning" game is played next time.

The third chief recommendation which I believe Ambassador Gerard will make to the president is that the British be forced to stop removing the first-class mail from the steamships which ply between the United States, Holland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden. And I believe that the ambassador will go so far as to recommend, in case the British should refuse to allow the passage of the first-class mail, that an auxiliary cruiser of the United States be sent every three weeks to carry the mails to and from Denmark. Such a move by the United States would create a side of sentiment against sinking
is not a secret ally of England and would remove some of the edge of Germany's hatred.

Among the fossils recently discovered by the United States geological survey in the states bordering on the Gulf of Mexico are remarkably well preserved impressions or casts of leaves of several extinct varieties of ash, oak, beech and hickory, which were found along with three present day species. Although the leaves themselves had rotted and gone, here and there some were found in soft clay by sediment in such a way as to leave perfectly preserved impressions.
The nuts, on the other hand, neither decayed nor petrified, but fell into pools of stagnant water, which is one of the best preservatives in nature, and there some were also buried under silt and clay. Owing to their hard coats those which fell into places favorable to their preservation are today an excellent specimen, though slightly flattened by the long soaking and the gentle pressure of the clay.
The deposit in which the leaves and nuts are found is not less than a million years old, or at least a hundred times as old as the pyramids of Egypt.

FANCY BIRDS WILL BE GIVEN AS FAIR PRIZES

Five Standard Breed Cockerels to Be Again Offered Winners in State Poultry Industrial Club Contest.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE TO MORNING JOURNAL.

State College, N. M., Oct. 14.— Pleased with the success of the poultry contest of the Boys' and Girls' Industrial clubs at the state fair in Albuquerque, recently, the Agricultural college will repeat its offer of prizes for next year, according to announcement of R. B. Thompson, head of the poultry department. Five standard breed cockerels are to be offered, one each of the following varieties: White Leghorn, Brown Leghorn, Light Brahma, White Wyandotte, White Plymouth Rock. The birds are to be bred and raised at the experiment station of the Agricultural college. At the 1916 fair, Robert Arnot, of Albuquerque, won the White Plymouth Rock and Sarah Herrick, of Socorro, won the White Wyandotte.
Annie Davidson, of Belen, had the highest scoring trio in the contest—three Silver Campbells. In order that she should not go unrecarded, the prize-winning couple cockerel in the state fair poultry show was purchased by the experiment station and presented to her.

The object in offering the prizes for the 1917 fair, as in the 1916 fair, is to induce the boys and girls of New Mexico to raise better birds, to discard the mongrels and keep standardbred poultry. Training the young people to raise the standard will mean better poultry for all New Mexico.

Egg Production.
The egg demonstration, which had for its purpose inducing producers of eggs to produce infertile eggs, featured as a part of the Agricultural college exhibit at the New Mexico State fair in Albuquerque, and at the Colfax County fair in Elton, recently, attracted a large number of interested spectators in both places.
The idea was to induce the consumers to demand that the people from whom they purchase eggs deliver to them infertile eggs. Infertile eggs are produced by hens having no male bird with them. Fertile eggs will start embryonic growth or germ development at about 70 degrees Fah-
